

Suntrap Shared Stories

Steve Harvey

Executive Director at Groundwork Hertfordshire

I went to Thorpe Hall Primary School in late 60's early '70's and I can vividly and fondly remember visits to Suntrap, which, at the time, seemed like a very rural and remote place. I particularly recall activities involving compasses, maps and "talking bushes" (teachers springing out to point wayward kids in the right direction)!

Those visits were also probably the first and last time that anyone taught me about the wonderful flora and fauna of Epping Forest. Those visits must have had quite an effect on me. After a long career in the City I now work for an environmental regeneration Charity
